Better recognition, improved engagement, increased ROI

Employee engagement is a big deal for a reason. Increasing engagement benefits retention, ROI, and a more positive workplace. These all generate increased productivity and success in the organization as a whole. One of the best ways to positively impact engagement is to provide rewarding recognition. Rewarding recognition involves more than just a pat on the back and a branded mug on the desk - it means specific, directed, and timely appreciation of a job well done. It means letting employees choose rewards they care about so they know you care about them.

With the tools available to you through Awardco you can quickly and easily show appreciation for all of the people you work with. Show your gratitude with timely recognition, provide encouragement on projects, and award points that employees can use towards tangible (and rewarding) rewards. Engage with your direct reports and coworkers through rewarding recognition and watch disengaged employees become enthusiastic employees—all with your new recognition program.

“33% of American workers are engaged by their jobs. 52% say they're "just showing up," and 17% describe themselves as "actively disengaged"; therefore, most employers have a lot of work to do to unlock the full potential of their workforce.”
